Investigators from the UNCG Department of Communication Disorders are studying the effectiveness of Acceptance and Commitment Therapy and stuttering modification on children who stutter's fluency, mindfulness, and thoughts and feelings about stuttering.

Children will answer questionnaires about both mindfulness and their thoughts and feelings related to stuttering. Stuttering will be measured with the Stuttering Severity Instrument-4. The study seeks to improve future therapy outcomes for children who stutter.

This two-week study will be held as part of a FREE camp where your child will participate in art, theater, hiking, games, water activities, and yoga. The camp is facilitated by a licensed and certified speech-language pathologist and several graduate clinicians.
